ARE NOW AGREED ON

ATTORNEY GENERAL MCREYNOLDS AND UNION PACIFIC REPRESENTATIVE REACH TERMS.

DETAILS NOT PUBLIC

Said That Plans Arranged Are in Accord With Wishes of President Wilson As Previously Expressed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, June 28.—Attorney General McReynolds and Representative of the Union Pacific, it was definitely learned today, have reached an agreement for the dissolution of the great Harriman merger.

The principle of the plan is in harmony with the views of President Wilson and he is expected to approve. It will be submitted Monday to the judges of the United States court for the 8th circuit at St. Paul.

The plan will go to the court with the government's approval qualified only by a request that the judges give a limited time before entering a final decree during which the government may possibly make objections which cannot now be foreseen.

Attorney General McReynolds does not expect to go to St. Paul, but will send General G. Carroll Todd, special assistant, who has been associated in the negotiations.

Attorney General McReynolds today said he was not ready to discuss the situation or details. It is understood, however, that the plan will provide for a exchanging thirty-eight million dollars of Southern Pacific stock held by Union Pacific for Pennsylvania interest in Baltimore and Ohio, the sale of the remaining thirty-eight million dollars of Southern Pacific through the medium of a trust company, and the sale of the remaining thirty-eight million dollars of Southern Pacific by either the Union Pacific or its share holders.

Officials declared that President Wilson and Attorney General McReynolds had reached an agreement for the dissolution provided a plan could be evolved that would meet the demands of the Sherman law. It was declared that while there has never been any tendency to place obstacles in the way of an agreement the administration has insisted upon an "adequate dissolution."

The plan evolved, it is believed, will accomplish, but the government would like the precaution of asking for a limited time within which to make objections so that in case public discussion of the proposition and further study by officials shows any weakness in the hands of the administration will not be tied.

Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, of Pennsylvania, was an early White House caller today in the hope that he might persuade President Wilson to delay the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg in order that he might not depart from his rule of abstaining himself from all occasions that might require him to make a speech during the present session of congress.

FORMER PRESIDENT OF BRAZIL IS DEAD

Dr. Manuel Ferraz de Campos-Salles Passes Away at Age of Eighty-five—Died Much for Republic.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Sao Paulo, Brazil, June 28.—Dr. Manuel Ferraz de Campos-Salles, president of Brazil from 1898 to 1902, died here today at the age of 85. During his term of office as president he was responsible for much of the work of reconstruction of the great republic which had just emerged from a long period of anarchy. Dr. Campos-Salles after leaving college in 1864 was for a time a newspaper man, eventually passing into the political arena. He was a member of parliament during the empire and became known as the "Brazilian Gambetta." Under the republic he became at first minister of justice, and did much to reform the laws of Brazil. He afterward became governor of the state of Sao Paulo, where he retained office until his inauguration as president.

The shipment consisted of two and one-half tons. Little delay is expected in shipping out the remainder of the 700 tons to be tested for its steaming qualities by the cruiser Maryland.

SENSATION CAUSED BY INDIAN FEMALE
AGITATOR IN PARIS

Revolutionary Carma Denounces British Rule at Women's International Council in Sorbonne.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Paris, June 28.—A considerable sensation was caused at the Sorbonne today by the Women's International Council, held at the Sorbonne, by the Indian female revolutionary, Carma.

By some means not clearly established, Carma obtained a seat on the platform between the Australian and Canadian delegates. The British and Canadian representatives were somewhat surprised to see the Indian woman sitting down in the front row. When she rose to speak, she played God Save the King, but to the surprise of the audience, she then turned to denounce the British rule in India and appealed to France to help the Indian people throw off the yoke of King George. She then turned to the audience and immediately sent someone to tell the woman to stop, but efforts to silence her only had the effect of making her speak louder.

The audience listened attentively to what Carma said, and applauded her when she sat down. It was apparent that, with the exception of the English and Canadian delegates, very few of those present had understood one word of her address.

Bravery of General Pau.

When France decided to increase the compulsory military service from two to three years in order to keep pace with Germany, one of the fiercest and staunchest supporters was the veteran General Pau, who lost his right arm fighting against the Germans in the war of 1870.

When General Pau, then a lieutenant, was wounded at the battle of Froeschwiller, with his hand shattered by a shell, he heard one of the doctors say to another that the supply of chloroform was giving out. General Pau said to the doctors, "Give the chloroform to the soldiers, I'll go without." The doctors took him at his word and saved through his wrist while Pau bit his handkerchief to pieces.

Cheese of Century Old. Cheese more than a century old may sometimes be tasted by travelers in the Valais and Vaud Cantons of Switzerland. The finest cheese is reported to be made in the village of Chese, a small village in the canton of Vaud. The cheese is considered a great delicacy in this district, and by ancient tradition each family possesses a giant cheese which is handed down from one generation to another. The cheese is religiously guarded in the cellar, and only brought out on the occasion of marriages, baptisms, and other family events of importance.

Unwelcome Centenary. The census taker who roomed attendant the poor abandonment of visitors to Paris theatre, is about to celebrate his centenary. She originated through a conflict between Bonapartists and legitimists during a performance at the Comedie Française a hundred years ago when the rival parties attacked each other with such violence that henceforth it was made compulsory that all sticks, umbrellas and anything else that could be used as a weapon be deposited in the cloak room.

Prohibit Gambling Machines. The French government has decided to prohibit the "cent-in-the-slot" gambling machines which are so found in the smaller wine shops of the republic. The latest statistics show that in 1911 there were no fewer than 64,953 of these petty gambling machines in use in France, and that their net receipts during the year amounted to nearly 150 million francs ($30,000,000).

These machines are usually leased by saloon-keepers on a profit-sharing basis. During 1911 the proprietors received a total of thirty per cent of the total takings as their share of the profit, in other words about $10,000,000. As the remaining $20,000,000 was represented by brass checks drawn from the machines by customers, it was successful in performing the feat of skill in which the game consisted, checks which are useless unless exchanged for liquor in the saloon in which they are obtained, it is evident that the French government is not a powerful magnifier. Such a powerful magnifier is responsible for a good deal of the recent increase of alcoholism in France had some foundation for his views.

Balzac A Hypnotist. That the great French novelist Balzac was not only a believer in personal "magnetism," but himself an expert hypnotist, is affirmed by Count Apponyi in his "Journal," which has just been published.

Count Apponyi says that Balzac once related an instance of event-reading at a distance which came under his notice. "I have believed in magnetism from that day," Balzac continued, "and I have myself been a powerful magnetizer. Such a powerful force that few people can resist me. Almost everyone who enters my house becomes hypnotized and I can make them reveal their most secret thoughts. Balzac boasted that he could even hypnotize at a distance."

OVER FIVE MILLION APPROPRIATION TO STATE UNIVERSITY

Budget Approved by Joint Finance Committee Provides for Years 1913-1914 and 1914-1915.—New Buildings.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., June 28.—The financial bill introduced by the joint finance committee and filed with the house today calls for a total appropriation for the year 1913-14 of $2,120,174.00 for the University of Wisconsin. The appropriation for the year 1914-15 will be $3,009,904.00. The general purposes for which the money will be spent as shown by the budget are:

Purpose	1913-14	1914-15
Operation	$1,814,149	$1,842,879
Property repairs and maintenance	62,000	62,000
Now construction	244,025	1,105,025
Total	$2,120,174	$3,009,904

The operating expenses of the university for the year 1913-14, according to the budget, will be about $1,800,000 over the present year, and the increase in operation in the year 1914-15 over the year 1913-14 will be about $238,000. The increase in property repairs for each of the coming years will be about $2,000,000 over the present year. The expenditures for new construction for the next biennial period will be approximately $3,009,904 more than the expenditures authorized for new construction during the present biennial period.

The detail items for new construction carried by the budget bill, as approved by the finance committee are as follows:

Item	Amount
For men's dormitory and commons and unions	$200,000
Wing to agricultural soils	53,000
Agricultural library building	6,000
Equipment for dormitory and commons and unions	50,000
Liberal arts building	150,000
Reat and bath house	7,300
Medical or physics building	200,000
Miscellaneous structures on agricultural farms, demonstration stations, etc.	12,500
Equipment for new educational building	100,000
Additional land	101,800
Heating plant and equipment	15,000
New equipment for university extensions	15,240
Equipment for college of agriculture	40,700
Equipment for college of engineering	32,000
Additional to Wisconsin high school	45,000
Other improvements	165,310

Grand total for new construction $1,349,030. Many of the new buildings for which appropriations are made by the budget will not be erected during the next biennial period as the large appropriations do not become available until March 1, 1915. Actual construction will be begun in the fall after the close of the next two years.

A new policy has been adopted by this legislature with reference to all state appropriations. For the first time in its history, Wisconsin has adopted the budget plan of making maximum appropriations for every institution in the state. The idea was conceived and worked out under direction of the state board of public lands. The board secured the services of J. B. Tanner, an accountant formerly connected with the late Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland, in working out the policy to be followed. Previous legislation has passed upon appropriations made from the general fund of the state. The former policy was to allow the normal regents and university regents to spend their own revenues in any manner they might see fit. The joint committee of this legislature has adopted a policy by which the legislature assumes control of every item of expenditure. For this reason maximum amounts to be spent by both normal regents and university regents are designated in the budget. The budget bill places a limitation upon the amounts that may be spent on operation, property repairs and new construction.

The board of public affairs prepared a financial budget and placed it before the joint committee at the beginning of the session. This budget contained the financial data of the year, typewritten financial data. Besides this, the finance committee has acted upon approximately 400 separate financial bills.

In connection with the appropriation made for operation of the university, the financial budget shows that the revenues accruing to the university are sufficient to more than meet the operating cost of the university. The item of university extension has been excluded. The finance committee claims that although the appropriations seem large it is a fact that appropriations required from the state for the university for the next two years are less than heretofore.

Chicago, June 28.—A tattered portion of the battle flag on Commodore Perry's frigate, the Lawrence, at the battle of Lake Erie, was the commander's standard today in the cruise to Lake Bluff. The whole state officials' day at the naval training station. The excursion was under the auspices of the Perry victory centennial commission of Illinois, to which the flag was lent by Adam Weckler, Jr.

The flag was hoisted to the mast of the gunboat Dubuque this morning and the booming of a gun gave the signal to start the cruise. The finest pleasure craft on Lake Michigan carried several hundred guests. Exhibitions were given enroute by the hydroplanes of Mr. Weckler and James A. Pugh, Captain George H. Clark, commander of the training station, and his officers, welcomed the visitors and dinner for 3000 was served at one o'clock in the mess hall. The afternoon program provided for a drill by apprentice seamen and tributes to the "Perry" by the "Perry" by the government, by ex-congressman George A. MOVE NEGRO UNIVERSITY
TO STATE'S INTERIOR

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New Orleans, La., June 28.—Bids were opened today for the sale of the New Orleans properties of Southern University, an institution for the education of negroes, which is to be moved to some town in the interior of the state. This marks the end of a long and expensive legal fight to keep the university in New Orleans. The institution is subject to the control of the legislature. For some years efforts have been made to move it to an agricultural district, where the objects of the school could be worked out to better advantage. When the legislature finally ordered its removal, an injunction against the change of location was obtained. The legal fight was ended a week or so ago when the Supreme court decided that a citizen had no standing in court when opposing a decree of the legislature unless the decree should be unconstitutional.

The annual Cotton Carnival was opened under most favorable conditions and with exhibits more numerous and varied than in any previous year. Displays illustrating every phase of the cotton industry could be seen on the exposition grounds with the exception of the leading for export of cotton. The display was conducted at the wharves, where the visitors were shown how cotton is stored aboard the ships for transportation to New York and Europe.

Backing Up
The Retailer.

It seems to us that it is a guarantee of quality when a manufacturer places his product in good retail shops of the country and then helps the retailer advertise it to the public in the daily newspapers. The daily newspapers are reaching everybody everywhere.

First of all it means that the manufacturer has perfected something worth while—worth advertising; then that he is enterprising in wishing to distribute his merchandise through the leading dealers of his community; and finally that those same dealers in lending their approval and their reputations to this plan of distribution believe in the goodness of the article itself.

It also means that the public is thus doubly insured and may therefore depend upon merchandise advertised jointly by both manufacturer and retailer.

Manufacturers who want to help their retail dealers, are gradually learning that the daily newspapers offer the best advantage. They are learning that the newspaper manufacturer can create a direct demand upon his dealers. No other medium will do this so economically or so effectively.

The Rev. D. Crosby Green Decorated With Order of "The Rising Sun"—Other Japanese Notes.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokio, June 28.—The legion of friends of the Reverend D. Crosby Green, one of the most active and prominent American missionaries in Japan, are congratulating him upon his decoration by the emperor of Japan with the order of the "Rising Sun," third class, in recognition of his services in Japan, extending over nearly half a century.

Dr. Green came to Japan in 1869, representing the American mission board, and devoted himself to missionary work for eleven years before he became a professor in the Doshisha College at Kyoto. It was twenty-five years ago that Dr. Green came to Tokio to resume his activities in the missionary field. Today at seventy he is both active and hale. He has been called a "people's bank" in so far as the object kept in mind by the directors is not primarily to make profits, but to ensure the betterment of the circumstances of the local population, who are themselves, the shareholders. It may be called a rural bank for the reason that it will lend money by preference, and at a favorable rate, to those engaged in agricultural pursuits. The directors explained that the bank acted in this way because agriculture was considered the main industry on which depended the welfare not only of the neighborhood, but of the whole nation.

The bank was willing to lend on any reasonable security, collateral, land or endorsement, the latter practically amounting to lending on character. The rate of interest remains almost the same, namely, per cent, and the director scouted the idea of any serious trouble arising between the bank and its clients or shareholders.

The working of the Cremona bank seems to be guaranteed to some extent by the flourishing Central Banca di Roma, and ultimately by the approval and watchful eye of the government, but it cannot be said to be a successful venture. The expenses are largely kept down by the altruism of the officials, most of whom give their services either gratuitously or at an almost nominal value. The bank is a model of the kind of cooperation which is being effected by many members of the American Commission, and stigmatized by some as a suicidal policy.

One of the chief functions of this bank is to make advances to facilitate the work of the Cremona Society of Local Farmers, having for its object the improvement in agriculture and the encouragement of modern methods on the part of its members. Membership may be had on easy terms. The bank is a model of the kind of cooperation which is being effected by many members of the American Commission, and stigmatized by some as a suicidal policy.

These three organizations—the Bank, the Farmers' Cooperative Society, and the Fertilizer Factory are in theory independent though they are made plain that in practice their membership and their directorate overlapped largely, and that they worked together for mutual advantage.

About ten miles from Cremona, in the village of Soresina, is situated what is presumed to be the largest co-operative dairy in the world, handling by the members of the society, here every single by-product was being fully utilized. The main product of the factory was soft cheese, but this was supplemented by the making of condensed milk, butter, and cream. Finally the risings were fed to hogs. As to the financial results, there is a general law in Italy which lays down that in the case of co-operative societies no shareholder shall receive more than a certain percentage of the profits, but the members of this dairy were receiving 30 per cent. The explanation is that ten years after the formation of the society all the share capital was paid off, all which, all the buildings and machinery were paid for. Now there are no shareholders receiving dividends, but simply members, among whom the annual profits are divided as a bonus. But in this annual bonus is reckoned as a dividend on the original value of members' shares, it amounts to 30 per cent.

Interesting Phases of Italian Rural Life Interpreted to American Commission Touring Europe.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Vienna, Austria, June 28.—Some most interesting phases of Italian rural life were interpreted to the American Commission on Agricultural Organization, Co-operation and Rural Credits, now touring Europe to examine the various systems in use on this side of the Atlantic. The commission, which inspected the People's Bank, which is more or less the mainstay of the rural population. This bank was excellently housed and was said to be in extremely flourishing condition. From the appearance of everything connected with the institution this was easy to believe. The bank is not truly co-operative in principle but is, properly speaking, a joint stock company dealing on a large scale with the rural population. It is particularly from the co-operative idea in so far as the number of votes held by the members is dependent on the shares they possess. On the other hand, it is called a "people's bank" in so far as the object kept in mind by the directors is not primarily to make profits, but to ensure the betterment of the circumstances of the local population, who are themselves, the shareholders. It may be called a rural bank for the reason that it will lend money by preference, and at a favorable rate, to those engaged in agricultural pursuits. Venustiano Carranza, Rebel Governor Of Coahuila, Outlines Terms to Which Followers Consent.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Mexico City, Mex., June 28.—Venustiano Carranza, the rebel governor of the state of Coahuila, proposes as a basis of peace between his followers and those of present administration that the permanent cabinet ministers as well as a candidate for the presidency of the republic be named at a convention of representatives of all the political parties in combination with rebel delegates.

According to Leopoldo Martinez, the negotiator, who claims to have received the proposal through Nicoforo Zambrano and Manuel Amaya, fugitive residents of Monterrey, these two assert that it is authorized by Carranza himself. He further suggested in this proposal that provisional president Huerta immediately name a presidential candidate and a minister for foreign affairs and the reconstruction office, after which the choice of convention would succeed constitutionally to the provisional president.

Leopoldo Martinez intends to endeavor to get Carranza to accept Carranza's proposal, but it is anticipated by those in a position to know the situation that the president will ignore the proposal.

Makes Protest. Venustiano Carranza, head of the constitutional cause in Mexico through his agents here, has protested to Secretary Bryan against the importation of munitions of war to the Huerta forces through Laredo, and while the same exportations are forbidden to the Huerta, the neutrality proclamation of 1912. His note contends that the situation in Mexico is not one to which the proclamation was intended to apply.

Owing to the impingement of the spinal nerve, the nerve nourishment that goes to the mucous membrane of the throat and nose is held up at the spine and consequently the mucous membrane of the throat and nose become weakened and susceptible to the irritating influence of the pollen in the atmosphere. If the subluxation at the spine is corrected and the normal amount of nerve nourishment is allowed to flow to the mucous membranes they will regain their normal strength and the atmospheric conditions will not trouble you.

The same is true of Asthmatic cases. The Asthma sufferer has a subluxation of the spinal column. With the subluxation removed through My Chiropractic Adjustments, Nature steps in and the relieved organs are strengthened and in a short time the Asthma disappears entirely.

ELLIS B. USHER GIVES HIS IMPRESSIONS OF GIRLS' SCHOOL.

PLACE IS DEMOCRATIC

Observer Finds Impressions of Contrary Mistaken—Learning Borne Without Ostentation.
(By Ellis B. Usher.)

Northampton, Mass., June 28, 1913.—Drifting about as a mere hyphen in the connection between a girl's college commencement and the world outside, has given me little opportunity to collect my ideas for a letter but to begin with, Smith College, with its 1531 young women, is not only the center of everything at commencement, it is the focus of the central figure of interest in this fine old New England town all the year through. This part of the Connecticut Valley is historic from Springfield, founded in 1637 by William Pynchon, of Hatfield, Mass., and Deerfield, a soldiers' monument in Deerfield, Mass., its "sacred" ground, that traces its story to the movement of Puritanism and his Connecticut Colony to New England, whence was overpoured the most intense and fertile valley in all New England. What that early settlement was it is worth a moment's time to recall. Hooker was a graduate of old Cambridge, not merely learned but wise, the man who is credited with leadership in governing his followers under a code to broad that it is said to have been the mould in which the constitution of the United States was run. Of learning all the ministers were the high priests, as well as the religious prophets of their time, and when Yale, Smith, Wesleyan, Trinity, Williams and the scores of other schools and seats of learning that now crowd this little Connecticut Valley are reckoned, it is not surprising to find one's half in a stupor of inspiring educational activity. Western readers need to realize that the Wisconsin river would cross all New England diagonally. Fox River Valley more nearly matches the Connecticut Valley.

Learning Meekly Borne. It is notable, too, in passing, that it appears more natural and less self-conscious than in some spots in the west whose "new" in government sometimes strongly suggest the parvenu in the lore of the ages. People here wear their learning naturally. They have not acquired a portentous, nor a patronizing manner, nor do they act as they were becoming, nor do they shouldered with their individual responsibilities. The atmosphere is not in a day, day by day, like a drama. It has its atmosphere and a background of age, for Prof. Moses, the oldest of the town, when all New England had only about 20,000 inhabitants, there was a graduate of old Cambridge, Oxford to every 200 persons. This came up to me as I saw many Smith girls taking the trolley to their nearby homes, or getting off the railway trains at the little way stations, white backs to a farm or a nest of white birds, or a green hillside, some of them amid the hills or on the exact spot often being revealed in the distance only a white spire pointing its slender finger heavenward, and the foliage, built long ago, probably and it not an actual counterpart, still bearing some resemblance to those spires modeled by or after St. Christopher when, which were among the earliest and highest types of simplicity in the architectural art of young America.

College Democratic. It follows, as the night the day, that genuine democracy is at home here, whether it be in religion, politics or letters. Several of the girls in this year's class who have taken the highest honors at Smith, have worked their way in whole or in part, one brilliant girl making her way partly by their way in the second hand college furniture. I am told that two thirds of Harvard's graduating class was made up of men who had contributed to their own support by outside investigations or labors that were in many cases allowed to count for college work. So nothing farther from the fact than a reference to a Wisconsin paper, not long ago, that Smith is "exclusive." There is no exclusiveness here unless its foundation is work and brains. Money counts, as money properly should, as a useful helpmeet, but it dominates nothing. The only way a railway president can get better accommodations here than other people, is to bring them with him, if he considers his private car better quarters. There were two or three such cars here this week. I heard of one well known hotel man, from a large New York city who had a cot in an attic bedroom, and had to brave the perils of a bathroom used by five women. The parents, who come by the hundred, with sisters, and cousins and aunts, take the best of the town affords, pack in the saloons everywhere, and have a beautiful time. The college houses are emptied except by the Juniors and Sophmores who stay to do the honors and drudgery of commencement, the ushering, and fetching and carrying of all the rooms of the off campus houses are packed with guests and the campus houses with alumnae, back to the college and meet their classmates. Women are everywhere, and are everywhere "IT" in large casual letters. Fathers are very small potatoes and few in a hill. But I have not sent out to give details, but rather to strike the note of the hour as I recognized it. The really impressive thing was the homing spirit of the occasion. I suspect that 90 percent of those girls, no matter whence they came, had been drawn back by the ties of New England birthright, no matter if it happened to date generations back.

President Seeley Honored. President Emeritus L. Clark Seeley, who for over thirty years, guided the formative epoch of this college, was the interesting figure around which gathered many of the most impressive features of the commencement. The degree of L. L. D. was bestowed on him and at the Class Supper of the graduates he appeared, unannounced, bade them farewell and told them that he had graduated with them. They entered in the past year of his administration, and his visit and speech so affected them that I heard one of the girls say that it was hard to push back the tears and swallow the lumps in their throats soon enough to sing him an affectionate adieu. He has been, and is, a remarkable man and has accomplished a splendid work. Smith has had neither fads nor fad-diet. It has been his favorite injunction to be genuine and unaffected, to be "gentle women" a good old fashioned phrase that loses no flavor by repetition. It was notable, too, that President Taylor, who has just retired from Vassar, should share the honors of the occasion, also receiving the degree of L. L. D. Bunker Hill Day. Not to overlook another feature that a western man would find impressive and which explains, in part, way the patriotic hereditary societies the strong here, as compared with the west, I noticed that the flags were everywhere displayed on commencement day. When I saw them on the business streets, in large numbers, I was led to ask, "Why?" and was told, with a note of triumphant pity for my ignorance—"Why, this is Bunker Hill Day!" It isn't a bad thing to be joined a little by such observances of the day that echoed that first shot for liberty that rang "round the world."

Northampton Municipal Theater. Northampton has among its treasures the home of Jonathan Edwards and the church where he preached, though it drew upon the achievement of the subsidized theater which has furnished some of the choicest dramatic treats, the Irish Players, for example, at popular prices. Its past performance given by Smith seniors of the Taming of the Shrew, that the idea originated with the late Miss Lardella Peck, head for years of Smith work in elocution. The past year was sufficiently satisfactory, though it drew upon the guarantee fund, to encourage a continuance of the enterprise, and Northampton may ultimately evolve a municipal theater which shall have its imitators in other cities.

An Erie Steamboat Man. (Advertisement.)

The Erie Railroad Lake Line I am hoping to inspect on my way west. This line is becoming of importance to Milwaukee and Wisconsin because its facilities are being improved and the package freight business by boat is increasing. Locally the docks and business are under the direct charge of Mr. W. J. Fitzgerald, a native Milwaukeean, a steamboat man by inheritance and experience, and a live member of the Erie force in this part of the world. Mr. Fitzgerald's title is assistant general agent, under Mr. Pheasant, whose field is the state. It is a executive ability, good judgment, and tactful methods have won for him the confidence and respect of his superiors as well as that of the shipping public. Mr. Fitzgerald has been in his present position for the past four years and is now the youngest transportation agent in the city of Milwaukee. He is a promising future in the service of the Erie Railroad Company.

Love. I am inclined to believe that for a woman love is the supreme authority—that which judges the rest and decides what is good or evil. For a man, love is subordinate to right. It is a great passion, but it is not the source of order, the synonym of reason, the criterion of excellence. It would seem, then, that a woman placed her ideal in the perfection of love and a man in the perfection of justice.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

GOLFERS OVER FIFTY ISSUES A CHALLENGE

Are Confident They Can Defeat Players Under That Age at Match Next Tuesday Afternoon.

"The members of the Sinissippi golf club whose ages are over fifty years are quite satisfied that they can play better golf than an equal number of members less than that age, and hereby challenge them to play a match next Tuesday afternoon, the losing team to pay for the supper at the club house. Now if the youngsters think they can play golf we would be glad to hear from them. Address J. P. Baker."

The above statement was given out this morning and is calculated to arouse the pride of the younger members of the club who will doubtless be quick to avail themselves of a chance to suppress the arrogance of the older men. It seems certain that a match will be arranged as the youngsters are fellows of spirit and will take the old boys at their word. There will be some display of "pep."

MRS. G. C. SEARLES DIED THIS MORNING

Well Known Evansville Woman Succumbs to Lingering Illness—Leaves Four Children.

Evansville, Wis., June 28.—Mrs. G. C. Searles died at her home in this city at 4:30 o'clock this morning after a lingering illness with Bright's disease. Mrs. Searles, whose maiden name was Fannie Wilson, was born in Jefferson, Ohio, June 3, 1859, and was married to Gilbert Searles in 1877. They resided in Ohio until after the Civil war, then coming to Wisconsin, settling near Evansville. For the last fifteen years Mrs. Searles has resided in the city of Evansville. She was one of a family of eight of whom one sister, Mrs. Sarah Smith of Minnesota survives her. Four children are left to mourn her loss. They are Riley and Walter Searles, Mrs. Anton Cole, and Cassius Searles of Salt Lake City. Final funeral arrangements have not yet been made, but the funeral will probably be held at the home at 2:00 o'clock Monday afternoon.

AUTO ON THE RANGE

Motor Car Has Introduced New Element Into Life of Cattle Country.

SECTION CALLED IMPASSABLE

Four Men Make Trip From Grandfield, Okla., to Las Vegas, N. M., in a 30 Horsepower Machine—Expenses Only $1.50 a Day, Exclusive of Fuel.

If Frederick Remington were alive today and could revisit the scenes which his brush and pen made immortal, he would find many changes from the old rollicking days of "boots and saddles" and every man a law unto himself. With the broncho busters and their calico ponies and the cattle from which they derived a reason for being, he would have to introduce a new element into his pictures, says the Motor. The ubiquitous motor car has made a place for itself in the life of the range that would compel its introduction into any picture that claimed truthfully to represent present-day ranching scenes. The remarkable way in which the automobiles now scamper far and wide over the trackless plains and up the sides of the desert hills, bid fair to change the time honored phrase "riding the range" to the twentieth century "motoring the range."

Every day witnesses the opening up of some new section of country whose rocks, sand hills and streams had previously barred the way to motor travel.

In many of the cities of the south and west men who own motor cars do not hesitate to use them for long cross-country journeys which a short time ago were laboriously reeled off astride a broncho or by tedious, roundabout railway travel. The picture on this page illustrates such a trip, which was recently made by O. B. Mapel and three friends from Grandfield, Okla., to Las Vegas, N. M.

The trip was made in a 30 horsepower four-passenger car, and the entire expense of the expedition were only $1.50 a day, exclusive of fuel and oil. The party crossed many great sections of prairie land that were roadless, running over cattle guards without even stopping. They drove on railroad bridges across deep streams. On one of these occasions they came to grief. It was on the bridge over the Red river. They drove too fast and broke two spring clips in bumping over the ties.

After crossing the Pecos river they made up some of the time that had been lost in repairing the broken spring. Great areas of practically level pasture land lay before them, and for miles they drove without even shifting gears. At night they camped wherever darkness happened to overtake them.

They made the return journey from Las Vegas over a different route from the one followed in going out. On the outward trip they passed through Wellington and Dumas, Tex., reaching Las Vegas by way of Pasa-monte. In coming back they took a more southerly course through Clovis, Matadore, Paducah and Wichita Falls, Tex., to Grandfield, Okla. Both routes, which lay through what is known as the "Panhandle" were carefully charted for future travel. It is interesting to note that both routes had been pronounced "impossible" for motor car travel, but Mr. Mapel and his car proved that they were not only possible, but enjoyable trips.

GAME LAW CHANGES OF LOCAL INTEREST AS RECENTLY MADE

Various Measures Effecting State Game Laws Passed at Present Session of Legislature.

A number of changes and additions to the state game laws have been made by the legislature at its present session. Game Warden W. P. Mason has received copies of the various measures some of which are of especial interest to local sportsmen.

The following law is now in effect, in regard to the catching of rough fish in dip nets in the waters of Rock river: "Section 560a-5 of the statutes is amended to read: It shall be unlawful for any person to fish for, take or catch, rough fish with dip nets not to exceed eight feet in diameter with meshes not less than four inches stretched measure, in the daytime between sunrise and sunset, in the Rock river and in the Crawfish river up to bridge number four in the town of Beaver Dam, county of Dodge, and in Butterut Lake in Ashland and Pierce counties, and all waters in Racine and Kenosha counties."

There has been added to the game laws a new section providing a closed season for the taking of crawfish: "Section 560a-15. It shall be unlawful to take, catch or kill in any of the waters of this state, with any device or in any manner, or to sell, offer for sale, or to ship or transport any variety of crawfish or crabs between the first day of March and the next succeeding tenth day of June."

"2. Any person violating any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not less than ten nor more than twenty-five dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than ten nor more than thirty days or by both such fine and imprisonment."

An amendment is also made to the game laws relating to the closed seasons for pickeral as follows: "In all inland waters except as herein specified, the closed season for game fish except brook trout of any variety, shall be the first day of March to the thirtieth day of May next succeeding in Beaver Dam lake or pond, and in Fox lake in Dodge county, Pike lake and Cedar lakes in Washington county and Nesbitt mill pond in Marquette county the closed season for pickeral shall be from the first day of March to the first day of May next succeeding."

Another section in regard to the closed season for fish in different waters of the state is amended as follows: "It shall be unlawful and is hereby prohibited to take, catch or kill in any manner or by any device whatever, any large or small-mouth, black bass, Oswego bass or yellow bass, in any of the inland waters of this state, between the first day of March and the thirtieth day of May next succeeding, except as hereinafter provided."

"5. In lakes Winnebago, Winnebago, Butte des Morts, Little Lake Butte des Morts, Poygan, and those parts of the Fox and Wolf rivers which adjoin said lakes, the big Wolf river up to the dam at Shawano and Fox river, there shall be no closed season, with hook and line except for black bass, Oswego bass, yellow bass and sturgeon, and for the above enumerated fish the closed season provided for in the first paragraph of this section shall apply."

"8. It shall be unlawful and is hereby prohibited to have in possession or under control in any one day, more than twenty-five pounds of Bullheads taken from all waters in Dodge county."

An amendment to the section in regard to the shipment of deer has been passed as follows: "(c) Any carcass or part of carcass of any deer between the third day of December and the succeeding twelfth day of November, provided, that the shipments of green hides or green heads of deer are not to be had in possession after January third or between January third and November eleventh of any year; and provided further, that any person firm or corporation may ship, carry or convey to taxidermist within or without this state the green head of a deer when severed from the body, without having the required coupon attached to the same, upon the issuance of a permit so to do to any such person, firm or corporation by the state fish and game warden, or any of his deputies, and when such permit so issued shall be attached to such green head."

The addition of a section to the statute in regard to clam fishing and the $50 non-resident license required has been given attention in these columns previously. Game Warden Mason reports that the clam fishers in this section have all complied with the terms of the law and have taken out licenses.

A subsection has been added which provides that suitable rooms and furnishings, including postage, stationery, periodicals and supplies shall be supplied the state fish and game warden, the cost of the same to be paid from the state treasury.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.

In a little article in the January American Magazine William Johnston says:

"It is not what people say about you—it's what you are that counts. The one person in all this world whom you should aim to satisfy is yourself. You alone know yourself. Other people know your outward appearance, your actions, your deeds. You, and you alone, know your motives, your ambitions, your thoughts.

"Are you satisfied with yourself? It is your own fault if you are not. Are you satisfied that you are doing the best you can for your work, that you are making the most of your time? Are you confident that your conduct toward your family, your friends, your neighbors, your employer, cannot be improved?

"Look yourself straight in the face this morning, in your mind's looking-glass. Ask yourself whether it is what people say about you or what you are that hurts. Analyze your own conduct in all matters.

"Put yourself in the other fellow's place and try to see your actions through his eyes. Imagine that you are your employer instead of yourself. Answer honestly whether if he knew as much about you as you know about yourself he would discharge you or would raise your wages. If you do this conscientiously there are many things you will do differently.

"Remember this, too. Other people's opinion of you is based on your own opinion of yourself. Are you self-respecting? Other people will respect you. Are you truthful? The world will believe you. Are you honest? Everyone will trust you.

"But weigh yourself frequently. Weigh yourself carefully. Be certain that your own opinion of yourself is justified. Be satisfied with yourself."

This is plain talk, right from the shoulder, the only kind that is worth while, in dealing with a topic of such vital moment. The common weakness of humanity is lack of self-knowledge. This weakness is not due to lack of opportunity to study, but rather to the disposition to neglect this most important branch of our education.

It is so much easier, and so much pleasanter, to study other people, than to study ourselves, that many of us are top-heavy with this kind of knowledge. That is the reason why many people are so busy these days in trying to regulate the universe, for the field is so large and so inviting that it takes in not only individual, but corporate life.

The most of us have ability enough, and a sufficient stock of muscle, to run a hand-car, but so little knowledge of our limitations, that we aspire to run a railroad, and are very confident that we could execute the work better than the men who are on the job.

The men who loaf around the little grocery, in the country village, are usually the embodiment of wisdom. They can hit the same crack in the floor, nine times out of ten, with a well aimed tobacco juice bombardment, and tell you better how the country ought to be governed, than the men elected to do the work, who they would run to cover if asked to preside at a town meeting.

There has come into existence, during the past two years, an organization known as the Industrial Workers of the World. The title is a libel; as they are industrial disturbers, under the leadership of such men as Haywood, of western mine fame, and other anarchists, who believe in taking the law into their own hands.

The mission of this aggregation is to organize the great unorganized masses, as was recently done at Paterson, New Jersey, and demand by force what they can not secure by law. They are fire-brothers, outside the pale of organized labor.

There is another class of men, higher up, represented by such men as Brandeis, the Boston attorney, who are trouble-makers of the same sort, encouraged by such publications as Collier's and other muck-raking magazines.

Brandeis made himself notorious, a time ago, by stating that American railroads were wasting a million dollars a day through inefficiency, and many foolish people jumped to the conclusion that he knew more about the railroad business than all the men connected with it.

People are so infatuated with the spectacular, that they wanted to reward this man with a cabinet portfolio, and he is now being consulted by Wisconsin law-makers on the conservation of state waterways.

But the most important feature of self-knowledge, found in the personal equation, for the drama of life has to do with the individual player, and whether it becomes a tragedy, before the play is half completed, depends very largely upon how well we are acquainted with ourselves, and how well we use the knowledge.

The tragedies of life are not all murders and suicides, and the list is far from complete when the accidents of every day history are recorded. The largest closet, in many homes, is occupied by the skeleton of the household. It would not be so bad, if the door could be locked, and the key thrown into the cistern, but this seldom happens.

The establishing of a home is always a lottery, and the lack of self-knowledge dates back to the Garden of Eden when the first couple to set up housekeeping succeeded in deceiving themselves, as well as each other.

The first man and woman were intensely human, and the home they founded was far from a model home.

The children of this first household were below the average and the record of its history is full of tragedy. This is true of many of the early homes, and the fact suggests that the great Creator never presides in any home as a Monarch, or in the throne room of any man, as an autocrat.

The human family has been slow to discover that the human will is the controlling force in every life and that Divine power never attempts to control it by force. The making of destiny, so far as character is concerned, is an individual proposition, pure and simple. We make or mar it, as we will.

It is said of the South American republics, that they fail because of lack of ability to govern themselves. That's what's the trouble with Mexico today, and the greatest element of weakness in our own structure is due to the same cause.

The home life, or the lack of it, is responsible in large degree, for these conditions, for the home is the unit of all that is good in public life.

When two lives are bound together by the holy bonds of wedlock, the object in view is to found a home. The discovery is usually made, before the honeymoon is completed, that the knowledge they possessed of each other is of the most superficial sort.

The girl whose face was wreathed in smiles, during the days of courtship, can frown on occasion, and the boy, noted for gallantry, and courtesy, can be a bore, without much effort.

These two young people have started out on a journey together, which stretches ahead for forty or fifty years. Sentiment fades away, and sacrifice, which is the essence of love, demands attention. If the journey is to be pleasant, and the new home more than a stopping place, it will be because in learning to know each other, they also learn to know themselves.

The most of us depend for happiness upon the associations of life, and many of these are outside the home, but there comes a time, down toward the end of the pilgrimage, when associations are broken up and the old friends are scattered.

The companion of a lifetime has departed, and as the circle narrows the life is forced to depend upon its own resources, and unless it is on good terms with itself, the outlook is dreary. Self-knowledge is worth cultivating at every stage of the journey.

SCRIPTURE.
Proverbs 5th Chapter—1st to 10th Verses.

My son, attend unto my wisdom, and bow thine ear to my understanding.

That thou mayest regard—discretion, and that thy lips may keep knowledge.

For the lips of a strange woman drop as an honeycomb, and her mouth is smoother than oil.

But her end is bitter as wormwood, sharp as a two-edged sword. Her feet go down to death; her steps take hold on hell.

Least thou shalt be snared of the path of life, her ways are moveable, that thou canst not know them.

Fear me now therefore, O ye children, and depart not from the words of my mouth.

Remove thy way far from her, and come not nigh the door of her house.

Least thou give thy honour unto others, and thy years unto the cruel.

Least strangers be filled with thy wealth; and thy labours be in the house of a stranger.

What Happened to a Tightwad.

We once knew a man who was too stingy to take the newspaper in his home town and always went over to borrow his neighbor's paper.

One evening he sent his son over to borrow the paper and while the son was on the way he ran into a large store and in a few minutes his face looked like a summer squash.

Hearing the agonized cries of the son, the father ran to his assistance and, in doing so, ran into a barber's wire fence, butting a handful of flesh from his anatomy and ruining a $4 pair of trousers.

The old cow took advantage of the hole in the fence, got into the corn-field and killed herself eating green corn. Hearing the racket the grocery man's wife ran out of the house, upsetting a four-gallon churn full of cream into a basket of kittens, drowning the whole lot.

taking the family savings bank with them. The moral is that every man should be a subscriber to his home newspaper.

Ten Years From Now.
Ten years from now a wedding will be reported as follows: "The bride looked very well in a traveling suit of conventional black, but all eyes were centered upon the groom. He wore a light gray suit that fitted his form perfectly and in his daintily gloved hands he carried a rose. His curly hair was beautifully done and a delicate odor of hair oil of the best quality floated down the aisle as he passed, leaning on his mother's arm. He has been prominent in society, musical and club circles and is one of our most accomplished young men, making many friends by his tender grace and winning ways. The bride commands a good salary as book-keeper and the groom will miss some of the luxuries to which he has become accustomed at the home of his parents. A crowd of beautiful men saw him off at the railroad station."

Old man Hicks says any darn fool ought to know whether it is hot or cold without going to look at a thermometer.

Lem Purdy is expectin' to go out west soon and start a newspaper. Well, anybody kin start one, but it takes a genius to keep her going.

Anse Frisby claims that if he don't have any more tire trouble he may get a new suit of clothes this year.

Old Grandpa Perkins, who is getting along in years and is some deal, was going into the opry house the other evening with his car trumpet under his arm. The manager of the show stopped him, and said: "The orchestra entrance is around back of the stage."

Lem Purdy always wears specs because he trades horses a lot, and is a state's prison offense for anybody to hit him when he has got 'em on.

Hank Tumms has got two daughters who recite, and another who is a well known vocalist, and he spends all of his evenings down at the Golden Nugget.

The prize in the smallest beef-steak for the money contest must certainly go to a Pewamaw man. A prize of about 20 cents worth of steak and received a nickel in change. On his arrival home he failed to locate the meat. At last he found a stray nickel in his pocket. Then the mystery became clear. In an absent-minded sort of way he had put the meat in his purse and the nickel in his pocket.

Their Aim.
"I suppose," said the husband, "I suppose that you women want to vote just like the men do?"
"Oh, no," replied the wife, "that isn't the point. We want to vote a great deal better than the men do."

Heart to Heart Talks

By JAMES A. EDGERTON

AN EXAMPLE OF AMERICAN MANHOOD.

Have you read the story of those business men of Nutley, N. J., who gave patches of their skin to save the life of a child?

Many of the newspapers carried the story. The little son of Mr. B. R. Colwell was so severely burned that the doctors said he would die unless new skin could be grafted over a large part of his body.

The physicians thereupon called for volunteers. The response was so immediate and general as to warm the cockles of one's heart and make him proud of American manhood.

Nutley is made up for the most part of New York business men. The volunteers did not come from the town alone, however. Men from other suburbs and from the big city itself came forward.

The newspapers told how these volunteers chatted and smoked on the porch of the Colwell home as they awaited their turns to go on the operating table.

The sacrifice meant not only inconvenience and pain to them, but the loss of valuable time from their business.

None of these things weighed against saving the life of the child.

The best of it all is that the sacrifice was not in vain. The child is recovering.

The incident furnishes a fine example of manhood at its highest, of the American brand of it that in some aspects is a little ahead of anything else on the planet.

There was no posing about it all, nothing spectacular. It was all taken as a matter of course, a part of the day's work.

Yet in its essence it had a touch of the heroic. Better still, it was Christianity put into practice.

It was a modern illustration of the brotherhood of man, of the many for the one.

So in writing down the things that make life worth while don't forget the men of Nutley.

Why "Vudor" Porch Shades Are Needed:

You need Vudor Porch Shades to get the most out of your porch.

To make it a spot where you can rest or work on the hottest days—outdoors, yet free from the sun's glare and heat.

You can do this with Vudor Porch Shades; you can add to the house another room, cool and shady, where you may enjoy every refreshing breeze, in secluded comfort. Vudor Porch Shades are very durable and will last many seasons.

Another good feature about them is the peculiar fact that those sitting on the porch can see out, but passersby cannot see in. In other words you have complete privacy and can use the porch or veranda the same as an inside room, with infinitely more comfort on hot days.

Vudor Porch Shades are just the thing for "boxing in" porches or balconies that are to be used as outdoor sleeping or living apartments.

Vudor Porch Shades are made of thin, flat strips of wood of the kind that best endures out-of-door exposure. These strips are closely bound together with Seine Twine, in a lock stitch weave.

They are artistically stained in soft, pleasing colors. These colors are weather proof, and will not fade or crack off.

The shades can be instantly raised, or lowered (operating on the principle of a theater curtain) and are easily and readily put up.

The lively interest in boxing among the sailors of Uncle Sam's navy has brought about the demand that they have a regular instructor to their roughly tutor them in the uses of the job, feint and sidestep. The introduction of a boxing instructor in the navy circles doesn't mean that the sailors are especially weak in the manly art. On the contrary, there are more real fighters uncovered among the tars than in any other field of endeavor. The new instructor will most likely be no other than Prof. Charles Prasse, often referred to as Sailor Burke. He will be stationed at the Brooklyn navy yard and will have the title of warrant officer.

Poor old Eli has had a rather unpleasant season of it the past year and the hated rival, Harvard has hung one on the blue every time out. In all of the major intercollegiate events Harvard has humbled the New Haven boys. At football, baseball, track and rowing there was nothing to it but Harvard in hockey and basketball, too, the Crimson triumphed. Last season at football, it will be remembered, Harvard beat Yale 20-0. They outscored Yale in the intercollegiate track championship some 22 points to 11. They wiped things up in all the rowing races. As a result of all these defeats Yale men are in high dudgeon, planning to make a lot of changes in their coaching systems and are saying, "Just wait till next year!"

While in the same mood, Jennings offered the information that the Giants have the National pennant as good as got. The Phillies, thinks they won't be able to keep up the pace they started this season with and McGraw's team is coming ahead consistently and they have the immeasurable advantage of a leader who thoroughly knows all the pro and con of winning championships.

WILL SYSTEMATIZE OLYMPIC GAMES AT MEETING IN JULY

Initial Steps to be Taken at Berlin Conference—Radical Reforms Suggested.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, June 28.—The initial steps toward systematizing and standardizing the Olympic games of the future will be taken within a month at Berlin. On August 20-24 there will be held the first conference of the provisionally formed International Amateur Athletic Federation, at which time a world-wide track and field governing body will be established. Representatives from the national amateur sport controlling body of every civilized country have been invited to attend, and a real working agreement and basis for future international meets will be established.

At the present time the committee in charge of the federation affairs consists of T. D. Fisher, Great Britain; Charles Roy, France; Carl Diem, Germany; H. Stankovitch, Hungary; and James H. Sullivan, United States. These committees, in addition to a number of other delegates, will assemble in Berlin several days before the opening of the conference in order to discuss in an informal way the plans and scope of the new organization. To the athletes of the world the recommendations of the I. A. A. F. to the International Olympic committee, will be of great interest. While the new body has not the slightest authority in matters pertaining to the Olympic games, its recommendations will carry much weight with the Olympic committee, when that body meets a year later at Berlin to plan for the Olympic meet of 1916.

It is known that the I. A. A. F. will suggest a number of radical reforms which, backed by the athletic governing bodies of such nations as the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France, Finland and the British colonies, are likely to be incorporated into the permanent Olympic games code to be prepared at the conference of 1914.

It will be strongly urged that the Olympic committee adopt a standard set of track and field events at recognized distances and weights to hold for all time and that this program be separate and distinct from such usual Olympic side events as shooting, wrestling, polo, tennis and other modern features of sporting competition. "No objection to these sports will be imposed by the I. A. A. F., but will be suggested that they be held as distinct and apart from the standard Olympic program."

The American delegates consisting of Gustavus Kirby, Col. Robert M. Thompson, James E. Sullivan, Barton S. Weeks and Joseph B. MacCabe will ask the new association to suggest that a number of perpetual trophies be secured and awarded during the games at Berlin in 1916. These will be the gold medals and a grand trophy for the winner of the greatest number of points in all the recognized Olympic sports of the meet, together with a number of minor trophies for the winning nations in track and field, swimming, wrestling, cycling and similar contests. "These trophies are to be held for three years and then returned to the country holding the succeeding meet."

The question of the measurement methods of future games also will be discussed. At present the Olympic meets are based upon the metric system, whereas the leading athletic nations of the world use yards and feet in measuring track and field sports. It appears likely that this proposed reform will fail, however, owing to the fact that the metric system has been used in Olympic games since the ancient meets in Athens and is really a better understood system than that afforded by the English measuring methods.

There is no way of comparing the best efforts of the world's leading athletic performers under the two systems. For example, the 100 yards standard sprint in America, England, Australia, Canada and South Africa is nine yards shorter, and one inch short of the 100 metro sprint. Despite this clash in the two measuring systems, it is probable that the point of substituting the English for the metric system will be passed if the countries most interested can secure a standardized set of Olympic events. This in itself would be a great advantage and assistance to countries preparing to enter teams, since it would permit the program to be known several years in advance. In addition it will bar the local Olympic committees from inserting in the schedules events which are intended purely for home athletic talent and which continue for a period of time which absolutely bars foreign entrants from continuing in the competition.

Dispute Claim of Yale.

The statement that the seventeen consecutive victories of the Yale baseball team during the recent college baseball season is an intercollegiate record is disputed in several quarters. With the exception of Parke Davis, the Princeton University athlete, who produced the record, the players fail to produce proofs. Davis shows that Yale at best only tied a record made by the Princeton nine of 1897, when the Tigers reeled off seventeen straight victories, beginning on April 17 and finishing on May 28 of the year 1897. During the run of the Yale team, Princeton defeated Cornell twice, Georgetown three times, Virginia twice, and Harvard, Brown, La-

Fayette, Lehigh, Pennsylvania State and other colleges at least once.

July as well as June is to have an international contest in the form of a series of races for the Canoe Challenge Cup which is to be the devotees of the tiny craft. Wait the America's cup is to the deep sea yachtsman. These races, with a Canadian club in the role of challenger, will be held on Cayuga Lake July 11, 12 and 14, in case the struggle for the trophy goes to a three race conclusion.

This competition will be the first in eighteen years for the canoe cup. Originally offered by the New York Challenge Cup for sailing canoes has been successfully defended since that date. Its history is as interesting as that of the America's cup. In 1836 the Royal Canoe Club of London sent Walter Stewart, and although the former was the first canoeist to design a canoe that would sail to windward, the Englishmen were beaten by C. Boyer Vaux and William Whitlock. Two years later Walter Stewart came over alone and was beaten by Reginald S. Blake.

In 1890, Ford Jones, the champion canoeist of Canada, started his long and unsuccessful campaign to capture the cup. In his first attempt he was beaten by H. Lansing Quirk. The following year, T. E. Barrington was the winner and in his last attempt in 1892, Ford Jones was beaten by E. S. Oxholm. In 1895, Ford Jones defeated Charles E. Archibald, another Canadian, in the last race for the trophy. The present challenger is the Canadian Canoe and Motor Boat Club of Ganarogue, Ontario, Canada. The organization has nominated Ralph E. Britton, who last year won the championship of the Dominion of the A. C. meet at Sugar Point on the St. Lawrence, as the sailor to make the new try at cup lifting.

COUNTY CLERK GETS FEE FROM LICENSES

Allowed to Keep Ten Cents Out of Hunting Permits According to New Law Just Passed.

County clerks of Wisconsin are allowed to retain ten cents out of each hunting license issued as their personal fee, according to a law just passed by the Wisconsin legislature. The text of the measure is as follows: "Section 1498. Subsection 2 of section 1498 of the statutes is amended to read: (Section 1498) 2. The county clerk shall receive with each such application for license the sum of one dollar, a portion of which he shall retain as his personal fee and as compensation for services rendered the state, and the remainder he shall transmit to the state treasurer. The retention by any county clerk of any such ten cent fee heretofore paid to such clerk is hereby legalized and authorized."

The clerk of Rock county has retained this fee in previous years acting on resolution of the county board of the year 1908. The fees in this county amount to $150 to $250 annually.

Another revised game law relating to hunting and fishing licenses has been passed as follows: "Section 1. Section 1498 of the statutes is amended to read: (Section 1498) 3. It shall be the duty of each county clerk in this state to remit to the state treasurer, on the first day of each month, all moneys received by him for hunting or fishing licenses during the preceding month, and to report to the state fish and game warden the number of licenses issued, and the amount of money remitted to the state treasurer. He shall also keep an index of the names of all licensees in alphabetical order, said names to be entered at the time the licenses are issued. Any county clerk who shall fail or refuse to comply with any of the provisions of this action shall on conviction thereof pay a penalty of not less than five dollars, nor more than ten dollars or by imprisonment in the county jail not less than five nor more than ten days."

THREE LOCAL TEAMS WILL PLAY SUNDAY

Cardinals Will Meet Fast Madison Nine—White Sox at Beloit—Fourth Ward Nine at Edgerton.

That the Janesville Cardinals will have to play fast ball Sunday afternoon when they cross bats with the fast Madison Nine is certain for their opponents have not lost a game this year and have two good pitchers in Fitzgibbons and Kraft. The Cards have been playing fast ball of late and with Tille, who won last Sunday's contest against the Beloit Moose at Yost park in an eleven inning contest, on the mound the outlook for a victory is bright.

In the fielding end of the game the Cards showed enough good baseball to indicate that they will hold their own in the matter of defense, and the way that they hit the offerings of Woodton in the eleventh and drove the famed Crandall off the mound shows that they have hit a good, batting stride. A large crowd of fans are expected to attend as the game will undoubtedly be one of the best of the season.

White Sox at Beloit.

A battle for revenge is sure to result when the White Sox cross bats with the Young Nationals on the North End diamond at Beloit, Sunday. The Sox defeated the Beloit team last month by a one sided score and this winning has caused the Nationals to challenge the Janesville team again. The Sox players are confident that they can take their opponents measure as their strongest line up will be in the field. Mullen is slated to do the pitching and judging from the way that Britt held the Beloiters in their last contest, he should be able to keep the game well in hand.

Will Play Edgerton.

With an underdog record against teams of their size and class as the Fourth Ward Stars will go to Edgerton on the Fourth to play the Tiger nine of that city. The locals have not lost a game in some time and all players are confident of continuing their winning streak. Their lineup is as follows: Spohn, c; La Fere, p; McGinley, ss; Sennett, 1b; Marshall, 2b; Slavson, 3b; Roberty, Kukulsky and Vinay, fielders.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. E. B. Vanderlyn.
Mrs. E. B. Vanderlyn died at her home, 436 Hickory street, at seven o'clock last evening after a lingering illness. Mrs. Vanderlyn, whose maiden name was Emma Blake, was born in James of Wood River, Neb., and made her home in Darien, Wis., until eight years ago when she moved to Janesville. She is survived by six daughters; Mrs. John B. Laurie of Magnolia, Minn., and the Misses Jesse, Marion, Ruby, Evelyn, and Ruth Vanderlyn, all of this city; two sisters, Mrs. Matilda Hosley of Clarksburg, N. Y., Mrs. Wesley Jaffra of Huntington, Wis., and three brothers, Andrew Blake of Beloit, James of Wood River, Neb., and Fred Blake of Rockford. Funeral services will be held at the home, 436 Hickory street, at 10 o'clock Monday morning. The Rev. Andrew Porter of Bristol, Wis., will officiate. The remains will be taken to Darien for interment.
Condition Little Changed: The condition of John Minnick, driver for the Buoh Brewery, who was seriously injured Wednesday afternoon when he fell and cut his neck on the sharp iron stop of a wagon was reported little changed this afternoon. He is still confined to his bed and in a serious condition.

Mrs. E. H. Dudley.
Funeral services for Mrs. E. H. Dudley will be held at the home on 323 South Main street, at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. The Rev. Dr. David Beaton will officiate.

James Winters.
Last services for James Winters will be held at the home of his son, William C. Winters, 309 North Bluff street, at 10:15 o'clock tomorrow morning. The Rev. T. D. Williams, pastor of the Carroll Methodist church will officiate. Interment will be made at Evansville, the remains being conveyed there on the Northwestern train leaving at 1:45 p. m.

Wayne Woodring.
Wayne Woodring, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Woodring, 303 Miles avenue, died at 2:20 o'clock this morning after a week's illness which the best medical talent that could be obtained failed to arrest. He was nine months and twenty days old. Funeral services will be conducted at the home at two o'clock tomorrow afternoon by the Rev. C. J. Roberts of the United Brethren church.

Michael Minnehan.
The funeral of Michael Minnehan was held this morning from the home, 505 Lincoln street. Requiem mass was celebrated at St. Patrick's church at 9:30 o'clock by the Rev. Father William Mahoney. Burial was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Radtke.
Requiem mass for Mrs. Elizabeth Radtke was celebrated at St. Mary's church at nine o'clock this morning by the Rev. Father W. A. Goebel. Those who acted as pall bearers were John Radtke, Robert Fuelleman, Ed. Jeru, Benjamin Fuelleman, Albert Radtke, and George Demrow. Interment was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

John Kelly.
John Kelly of the town of Johnston, passed away at one-thirty this morning. He leaves a wife, three sons, John William of Milton, Walter Kelly and Thomas Francis, both of Johnston. His daughter, Mrs. L. Madden resides in Chicago.

Mrs. Kelly was one of the oldest residents of Johnston having resided there having resided there for the past forty-five years. Funeral services will be held at the St. Mary's church Monday morning at ten thirty.

Humorists Always Geniuses.
Men of humor are always in some degree men of genius; wits are truly so, although a man of genius may, amongst other gifts, possess wit, as Shakespeare—Coleridge.

A Good Excuse.
A choir boy recently gave as an excuse for missing choir practice that he had to sit up with a dying friend, but an investigation proved that it was his best girl who was "just dying to see him."

FORTY YEARS AGO

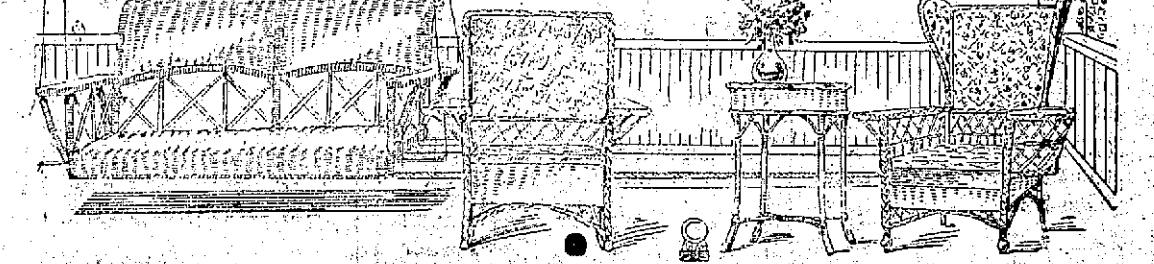

Janesville Daily Gazette, June 23, 1873.—That the embodiment concentrated wisdom, the Foundry Lac-Com-monwealth is lead to think that the sad part of the story of the Rachel Thomas murder is that all three parties were not killed. The world has been waiting with breathless anxiety for the Commonwealth opinion of the case and now that it has spoken there is no appealing from any higher authority.

A fair and honest price only charged. John Comstock shoveled up two full of frogs in his cellar yesterday afternoon which would cover the ground all over the cellar. The moving column is steadily moving in the northeast direction but their progress is slow.

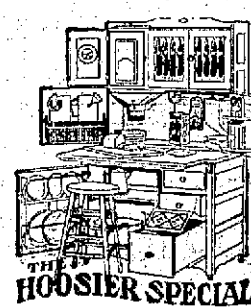

A fourteen year old graduate of the reform school, exhibited his want for further trouble and corrective measures by stabbing a boy in the head on the Williams House corner. The injuries were not serious. A match game of baseball played in Beloit on Wednesday between Racine and Beloit clubs, resulted in the defeat of the latter. Score 22 to 12.

THIS GO-CART WILL GIVE YOUR BABY MORE FRESH AIR.

It is the strongest and most durable go-cart made. We've tested hundreds and make this unqualified guarantee. By being made simply with all unnecessary joints and rods left out it is lighter in weight than most go-carts. It closes and opens with one motion. A woman can manage it with one hand. As a result, women who have used this cart, say they get out with the baby far more frequently. Both baby and mother benefit by the fresh air. Sturgis Carts from $5.50 to $22.00.

PORCH FURNITURE PRICED REMARKABLY LOW

Now's your chance to buy some really worth while pieces of porch and lawn furniture in reed at prices that will mean a considerable saving to you.

The reason for the deep cuts we're making in porch furniture right at the height of the season is that we need the room. Next week the First National Bank will move into its temporary quarters in the west side of our store, taking one half our downstairs floor space. That's the why of the little prices.

Our stock of porch and lawn furniture is without doubt the largest in Janesville and naturally you can find what you want here quicker and easier than elsewhere and without having to "shop around."

The exterior is carried out in a very simple way with the main roof extending over the porch and supported by heavy columns.

FIRST FLOOR.

Considerable space is gained on the first floor by placing the stairway at the rear of the kitchen, thereby giving one entire side of the house to the living room. The combination stairs take up very little space and the outside entry is combined with the grade entry to the basement, which effects a further saving in space. The second floor contains two unusually large bedrooms for a house of this size, a smaller bedroom, and in addition a good size bathroom and large closets for each bedroom. The first floor is finished in oak and the second floor in yellow pine, all stained and varnished. The floors are oak throughout. Basement under entire house. The attic is unfinished and is reached through scuttle in ceiling of second floor hall.

This house has been built for $2000 and should be duplicated under ordinary conditions for the same amount. Built under expensive conditions the cost might run to $2400.

SECOND FLOOR.

A Matter of Importance

It is VERY important that the water lines leading to the house and to the faucets be of ample size to deliver a good steady pressure. THE NEW GAS LIGHT COMPANY guarantees the Ruud Automatic Water Heater will heat four gallons of water per minute. Have your Plumber guarantee that the piping is large enough to deliver this amount to the farthest water outlet in the house.

If you contemplate building, clip these ads and file for future reference.

Sell Your Own House Not Your Neighbor's

People who desire to sell their city property should keep several things in mind when preparing their classified ads.

Too many people are so indefinite in their writing that to the stranger it would be hard to tell just what they have to sell.

Describe your house, tell what it has in the way of improvements, tell of the lot and its improvements, tell of the neighborhood, give the price and the terms. Make it all plain and truthful and you will get returns.

City Property is always salable if the price and location are attractive.

WOMAN'S PAGE

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

"METHINKS the lady doth protest too much," is in Shakespeare's time, so today, overmuch protesting is a suspicious sign.

There are a great many things which, in the intercourse between ordinary human beings, are taken for granted. To make protestations about them is more likely to arouse doubts in the hearer's mind than to reassure him.

For instance, if a man goes out of his way to bolster up some statement by saying "Now I'm telling the gospel truth," instead of making me believe in his veracity, he instills doubts of it into my mind. It ought to go without saying, that he is honest. But he evidently thinks he needs to reassure me, and being in his own confidence, he probably has good reason for that thought. He may be telling the gospel truth at that moment, but it is perfectly patent that that isn't his habit.

One is reminded of the story of the captain who wrote in his log: "The mate is drunk today." The mate protested, but the captain said, "It's true, isn't it?" and when the mate admitted that it was, the captain said it must stand. A few days later the captain sprained his hand and he mate had to write the log. Whereupon he promptly wrote, "The captain was sober today." Strange to say, the captain was not at all pleased at thus having his sobriety attested.

The subject of overmuch protesting was brought to my mind by some new acquaintances who have recently made a rapid rise in the financial world. I didn't know the family before the man of the house made his money, but I know the rise must have been recent because of the entirely new manner of talking and acting. Midas has apparently touched their vocal chords, for they talk gold all the time.

No matter which way the conversation turns this man and his wife invariably bring it back to the one subject in which they seem to take an interest—money. How much and so on, making in his beef business, how much one of their friends paid for his new automobile, the number of bathrooms in another friend's new house and how much they cost, per bathroom, the tremendously high rate of the hotel at which they stayed last summer, such is the editing subject matter of their talk. Though they try to make their references casual, a child would understand that they are saying as boldly as they dare, "You see how much money we and all our friends have." But this is what they really say to all who have the knowledge of human nature as a key, "You see we aren't used to having money and so it seems a big thing to us."

People who are used to wealth, refinement, education, and the other good things of life, take these things for granted. It is only those to whom such things are strange and new, who protest about them.

As in Shakespeare's time, so today, overmuch protesting is a suspicious sign.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Things Worth Knowing.
If you wish your table linen to look nice, do not put it through the wringer, as it makes creases that will not come out even if the cloth is ironed when very damp. In fact, any clothes that you wish to look very nice when ironed will be better if they are wrung by hand.

To take away the shine of woolen goods, rub gently with sand paper.

Help in Dusting.—Make a duster of a couple of pairs of old stockings with the feet cut off, sewed together and sprinkle with some kind of oil.

To sweeten rancid butter, melt the butter, skim it, then place a piece of light brown toast in it and in a few minutes the toast will have absorbed the unpleasant taste and smell.

The Table.
Chop Pickles.—Thoroughly wash one peck of cucumbers (large or small or both), and cover with one-half cupful of salt. Let stand over night and in the morning pour off excess brine. Put into enamel sauce pan with one quart of vinegar, a teaspoonful of pepper, cinnamon, allspice and cloves (ground), and a quarter pound of white mustard seed. Cook slowly for two hours. This will keep in open jars, although I cover mine with wax as for jelly.

Cottage Pudding.—1 egg, 1 cup of milk, 1/4 cup butter, 2 1/4 cups of flour, 3/4 cup of sugar, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 3

Cool Comfort Assured Every Ironing Day

Make the family ironing an easy, agreeable task for your maid of all work or your laundress, this summer. Have your ironings done quicker and better. You can, if your home is electrically lighted and you own an Electric Flat Iron. Out on the porch or in any cool spot about the house—wherever an electric socket is convenient—an Electric Flat Iron can be used. Costs but a few cents for electricity to complete a big ironing.

A Full Supply of Electric Irons In Stock.

JANESVILLE ELECTRIC CO.

of white sauce, and one egg yolk. Season with salt, pepper and nutmeg. Cook until hot. Fill cavities of carrots with this mixture, place in buttered pans and bake for fifteen minutes. Arrange two cupfuls of hot chopped cooked spinach in shape of a pyramid on a hot dish, season and surround with baked carrots. Decorate with onions, and pour a hot gravy around.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

THERE'S never a rose in all the garden, but there's always a good one. But, makes some green spray sweeter. There's never a wind in all the sky. But makes some bird-wing feister. There's never a star but brings to heaven Some silver radiance tender.

And never a rosy cloud but helps To crown the sunset's splendor. No robin but may thrill some heart. His dawn-light glances voicing God gives us all some small sweet way To set the world rejoicing.

FISH, FLESH, FOWL

A most appetizing way of serving creamed fish is to carefully remove all bones and skin, keeping the meat as unbroken as possible, and arrange the fish in a buttered baking dish. Cover with a slight sprinkling of bread crumbs, and if the fish is not rich, a few bits of butter. Pour over this sufficient cream to moisten well, set in the oven and bake until the buttered crumbs on top are well browned. Serve from the baking dish.

French Baked Fish.—Stuff the fish with plain bread dressing, with salt and pepper for seasoning. If there is any of the stuffing left, it is to be arranged around the fish in small cakes. Pour over the fish a can of tomatoes and sprinkle the top with a head of garlic finely minced; season with salt, pepper and butter, with a dash of cayenne. Bake as usual.

Molded Ham.—Take a large cupful of prepared ham, add the yolk of one egg and a teaspoonful of marjoram, mix well and press into a bowl, then turn into a baking pan. Sift over fine crumbs, put a piece of butter on top and bake until brown. Serve on a hot platter with tomato sauce.

Kentucky Fried Chicken.—Cut the and wash and dry well, rub with salt, flour, sage, pepper and a dash of cayenne. Put into a frying pan with enough lard in the bottom to just cover it; lay in the chicken and put into the oven, bake until brown. The baking in the oven saves watching, and it is more evenly cooked.

Nellie Maxwell.

A Fine Husband.
"Gladys Jane has a perfectly lovely husband."
"So?"
"Yes, he's willing for her to have anything she can get on credit."

Every Day Talks For Every Day People...

So many people in moderate circumstances envy their neighbors when half the time if they got out and hustled as their neighbors in question probably do, they'd be more wealthy too.

We none of us want to begin at the bottom of the ladder, or think success is just a matter of waiting for the reward if we toil even a little. Do we forget that to have one must strive that eternal vigilance is the price of success?

A man will work in a shop for years content to do what is put before him no more.

He wouldn't be guilty of starting to work before the whistle blew, and is always washed up, with his coat and hat on waiting for the whistle to tell him at the close of the day that he is released. Would he work a minute past six? Not he! Do you think he's a "sucker"? No, sir!

And yet this type of man will grumble if the man next door works longer hours. The quiet, alert man who didn't wash up on the company's attuned to the whistle, the man who attuned as if he were glad he had the ability to do as he liked it and as if he actually took an interest in his work.

There's too much talk of favoritism and pull nowadays amongst our men; luck, luck is the word, and the word. The sooner we wake up to a realization of this fact the sooner we start to achieve, to win. There never was such an urgent need for really good help as there is today. This is a fact. Ask any man or woman who handles help and see if they do not bear me up in my statement. Employers are willing and eager to pay the best of wages for efficient help, for help they can depend on, for help that can take responsibility and who will work for their employer's interest as they would their own.

We draw salary for the time that the foreman isn't around just the same, as for the time he is watching our work. The eye-servant is rarely if ever in line for promotion.

Let's give the manager credit for at least a little intelligence. They see through a ruse occasionally, and it always eventually pays any man or woman to try and earn the salary they draw, to not envy the man higher up, to emulate him, and to keep ever in mind that the ladder of an orchestra is most generally a man who once played second fiddle.

HEART and HOME PROBLEMS

BY MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am a girl of eighteen and am going with a young man of twenty. Very often when together we have what the girls call scraps. They never last long, but are unpleasant. Do you think we ought to stop going together or should we try to keep from scrapping? (2)—Does it mean anything when a fellow puts his cap on a girl's head?

S. M.
(1)—If the two of you will remember that it is not ladylike nor gentlemanly to scrap, I think you will get along better together. (2)—It is said that when a girl wears a man's cap it is an invitation to kiss her.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What will take camporated all out of white linen?
BRIGHT EYES.

Think cold water and soap will take it out, but if you don't want to use water, try my gasoline or chloroform. Do this outdoors. Place a clean white blotter or cloth under the stain and rub in toward the center of the spot so no "ring" will be left after you have the stain out.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of eighteen. (1)—Is it wrong for a girl to go motorcycle riding with her boy friend? (2)—Some people think it's wrong because I hold onto him with both my arms while I am on. I must, because I am afraid I will fall off. Now, is it wrong? (3)—Is it proper for my friend along with papa and mamma and I when we go auto riding? (4)—Please give me a cure for corns? (5)—How can I develop my bust? (6)—All the boys like me on account that I have nice clothes and the girls all are sore at me. Now what shall I do to gain their friendship? INTERESTED.

(1)—It is dangerous and I really do not think it is a good idea for a girl to ride on a motorcycle. (2)—This only proves what I said in answer to your first question. (3)—Yes. (4)—Tie on a fresh piece of bandage about the whole side next the corn every night. The sore will soon go and you can cut out the corn. Wash your feet every day, put

DOMESTIC SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

Strain through a jelly bag and put the juice in a sauce pan and cook for three minutes. Have an equal amount of sugar, stirring in the oven, add to the juice, stir until the sugar is dissolved, bring again to the boiling point for two minutes and pour into sterilized, dry glasses; place them in the sun under glass or cheesecloth and the sun will evaporate the extra moisture and leave a nice firm jelly with fine flavor. Cover with melted paraffine and keep in a cool, dry place.

When We Go Berrying.
I have heard mother tell of the new country in which she lived in her early housekeeping days when all the fruit was obtained only as they went berrying. Then also how sweet and delicious in flavor such berries were. All this has been proved to me several times in the last few days.

Coming in from the country on the car one morning last week a young man said, "I picked half a bushel of wild strawberries for breakfast." Another said, "We picked enough wild strawberries for a short cake."

And then I had the pleasure of doing some picking myself, so we were serving what much of the flavor is lost. There is only one heat that I know of which is equal to the preserving of this flavor, and that is the heat from the sun.

Save Labor.
In our "New Housekeeping" we are looking for every means of saving unnecessary labor. It is a very easy matter to start these berry preserves and the labor of the berry work and the mistress of the house can be perfectly free to attend to other duties or pleasures instead of standing for hours over a hot stove.

Most of us have heard of the "Revolution of Aunt Mary" and applauded her in it, but we have been slow to grasp "The Emancipation of Woman," which is coming to relieve her from the bondage of excessive labor and arouse her intuitive genius in devising simplified methods of work.

Better thinking and planning result in many improvements. Many a woman would be ready for a little trip picnic outing for a few days if it was not strawberries or currants or raspberries or tomatoes and many other fruits all waiting for her guiding hand for their preservation for future use.

Get busy and find the simple scientific methods and then use them. Many berries sprinkled thickly with sugar and sun dried are delicious; when ready to use soaked in a double boiler or a fireless cooker.

Sun Preserves.
Dampness is a great foe to successful sun cookery. Select any berries or mixture of one-third currants and two-thirds raspberries, or red or white currants alone, cherries or pineapple for sun preserving. Berries should be washed, hulled, drained and covered with the sugar equal weight with the fruit. Stir thoroughly. The amount of sugar if not so rich a preserve is desired.

Put this into the refrigerator over night spread on a platter. Add a pint spread of water to each cup of sugar and boil to a syrup about fifteen minutes; cover and stand this also in a refrigerator. In the morning distribute the syrup equally over the berries or any small fruit, pineapple, a better steamed fruit, until tender; stand in the hot sun for three or four days or until the syrup is thick and jellyed; then turn into sterilized glasses which have been wiped dry. The fruit should be covered with in the sun, with glass and when this is not possible use cheese cloth.

Sun Cooked Jelly.
For currant or berry jelly wash the fruit, pick over and weigh, heating only enough to start the juices.

MARY THROWS IT IN THE WASTE BASKET PRINCESS PAT WRITES A BOOK; QUEEN

Princess Patricia of Connaught, daughter of the governor-general of Canada, has just met with a distressing experience. After writing a book about her experiences in Canada and her impressions of the United States, her aunt, Queen Mary of England, ordered the manuscript destroyed. This was done, to the evident grief of Princess "Pat," who is nursing literary ambitions.

Queen Mary neglected to say just why she put a crimp in her niece's first literary venture. It is possible that the book contained complimentary statements about the United States.

Moral Indifference.
If ignorance and passion are the foes of popular morality, it must be confessed that moral indifference is the malady of the cultivated classes. The modern separation of enlightenment and virtue, of thought and conscience, of the intellectual aristocracy from the honest and vulgar crowd, is the greatest danger that can threaten liberty.—Henri Frederic Amiel.

Ruskin's Creed of Work.
The man or woman who does work worth doing is the man or woman who lives, breathes, and sleeps that work; with whom it is ever present in his or her soul; whose ambition is to do it well and feel rewarded by the thought of having done it well. That man, that woman, puts the whole country under an obligation.—John Ruskin.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

INCREASES THE JOY OF SUMMER VACATIONS

HERPICIDE CO.

THE coming of summer is fraught with the keenest of anticipations. We are looking forward to that trip to the seashore, lake, mountain or country and the amusements attendant upon the season. If we have red blood the sports and pleasures of the vacation period such as tennis, golf, boating, fishing, etc., appeal to us.

But this season of outdoor enjoyment also brings with it added responsibilities, in the extra care which must be devoted to the toilet. The hair in particular needs much more attention than at any other time. The sebaceous glands throw off more waste material and there is a consequent larger and more rapid accumulation of dandruff, which makes the frequent and intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide imperative.

Regular applications of this valuable scalp prophylactic keeps the head perfectly clean and the hair and scalp healthy. Herpicide adds gloss and beauty to the hair and thus increases one's personal charm and attractiveness.

The cooling effect, the sensation of cleanliness and the exquisite odor all tend to make Newbro's Herpicide a most delightful hot weather hair dressing. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

He took her hand and patted it softly. "They are foolish little fears," he said gently. "Think how we are already safe. And think of all the years that I have spent to make us safe. Look at it!" He lifted a hundred dollar gold certificate from the table. "It is perfect. I could pass that to the experts at the treasury. It will be the first time in the history of the world and—"

But the woman could not be warmed with his enthusiasm. She shivered and her eyes roamed about the half-lit room with a frightened, terrified look. "We shall be hunted always—wherever we go," she declared in a low voice. "We can never get away from it. It's too big, Friedrich—it's too big. They'd never let a man who could make a bill like that escape. You know if one of these men were caught he'd betray you to save himself. The government would pardon him—would pardon them all—to get you. Safe! Every prison in the world would be waiting for you!"

Kreiser's head sank slowly, and he stared darkly at the table under his bushy, knitted brows. "I shall never go to prison again," he said slowly and ominously. "If I am caught"—He felt her shudder and stopped in the middle of the sentence.

"I hope to God you'll kill me, too, then, Friedrich," she cried. "I'd never have the courage to kill myself, and it would be the end of everything for me."

He rose and put both hands on her shoulders and gazed long and earnestly into her face.

"Ah, you are a great soul!" he breathed passionately. "You give up everything for me! You leave everybody; you give up your little daughter; you share prison with me! And I!" He made a gesture of bitter despair and self reproach. "I take—take—take! I am the selfish one! And now, when I say I would take my life, you would share death with me. Ah, you are the great soul!"

"We shall be hunted always," she declared.

He turned back to his work to hide the working of the deeply lined face.

The woman, too, moved off as if her emotions were too strong to control. She leaned on the mantel and stared into the blackened fireplace in silence for some time.

"Oh, if I could only make you feel as I do!" she exclaimed in dreary despair. "I'm so oppressed, Friedrich!" she turned to him again. "This is a great thing that you have invented—this process of color photography. Think what can be done with it! It would mean millions to you—and fame."

"Yes, my love," he replied gently, but shook his head. "In an honest world—yes! But they would cheat me. They would steal it. And, see, I must have money to finance it; to protect it. Then, when all this blows over—in Germany, perhaps. Who knows?"

The buzzer sounded loudly, and he looked up. "That must be Skidd," he muttered, and walking quickly to the door, he opened it and slipped out into the dark hall. He called softly and there was a confused murmur from below. Then he returned with heavy frown on his face.

"No, it is Hurley," he exclaimed. "Hurley!" echoed Mrs. Martin, startled. "He ought to know better than this. He oughtn't to come here."

"It must be because Gage telephoned to him about the girl," ventured Kreiser.

"Oh, yes," agreed the woman, greatly relieved. But the frown did not disappear from Kreiser's face. "Always, he is finding fault with things we do," he grumbled. "And it is he who makes the mistakes."

At that moment the lawyer, in evening clothes, stepped in at the door, followed by Gage.

"You are wrong to come here!" declared Mrs. Martin abruptly.

"What's this about your bringing a strange woman here?" demanded the lawyer, his manner more abrupt than the woman's.

"That's all right," declared Mrs. Martin. "You needn't worry about that. I know what I'm doing."

"What are you doing?" he demanded roughly.

"Do not be so rude," interposed Kreiser with dignity. "She will explain to you."

"Friedrich," said Mrs. Martin quietly, "you and Gage go downstairs and let me talk to him."

"But, my dear," protested the artist, with a gesture toward the table, "I cannot leave all this here."

"Well, I guess my seat's wanted," snarled Gage, making for the door. "I suppose, when it's time for me to know what's going on in this shack I'll be tipped off by the bull on the beat!"

"Well, who is it?" demanded Hurley, after Gage had vanished.

"It's Miss Maurer!"

"What?" exclaimed Hurley, the color stricken from his face in an instant.

"Kayton asked me to take charge of her," explained Mrs. Martin simply. "My God! Are you crazy?" gasped the lawyer.

"It would have been crazy to refuse," returned the woman as quietly as ever. Hurley swallowed hard and bit his lip.

"This is a plant!" he declared in a hoarse whisper.

"But, listen!"

"Yes," replied Mrs. Martin, her lips twitching faintly.

"Well, by Jove!" exclaimed Hurley, his voice cracking with the excess of relief, the strong reaction from his terror of a few moments before. "Never sleep Kayton!" he cried and burst into a hearty laugh. "Isn't he wonderful, this great detective? Oh, it's all advertising—he's a pinhead! If he knew the kind of horsehulk they have in some of those lodging house mattresses, oh, Kreiser!"

"Hush!" warned the German. "Not so loud!"

But Hurley was irrepressible. "Have you seen the papers?" he chuckled.

"This is a plant!" declared Hurley.

"They're full of her flight. Everybody is now sure of her guilt."

"How terrible!" shuddered Mrs. Martin, with a catch in her voice. "What is it that Kayton suspects?"

"How could you guess?" laughed Hurley scornfully. "A man with a mind like that! I judge he thinks it's Bruce—because he hasn't taken him into his confidence—and the boy's distracted. He's got the whole city searching for her."

"Friedrich," exclaimed the woman as if suddenly seized with a terrible dread, new and overpowering. "If they never find out the truth they'll never clear her! And if they do find out—"

The bluntness was sternly impressive. Hurley shrugged his shoulders.

"Oh, Kayton will cook up some story to cover his failure," he said lightly. And, laughing quietly, he went out and down the stairs to the street. He did not know that in the upper room of the house next door Manning was swearing at him softly, while two of his associates read his shorthand notes over the boy's shoulder. Manning revered his chief.

When the street door had closed Kreiser looked at Mrs. Martin and shook his head soberly.

"He should have kept away from this detective," he declared uneasily. "It is a bad thing when a man is too bold from apprehension. He should not sniff around traps."

The woman did not seem to hear. "Friedrich," she cried distractedly, "what have I done to Mary? I have tried to keep our lives as far apart as I could, but it seems as if the devil had drawn us together—to ruin her."

No man is so mighty in knowledge or cash that when he drops out he'll make more than a splash. We'll go to the bonnyard to see him interred, and say, "When he lived he was surely a bird," and then we'll dismiss him at once from the mind, and give all our thoughts to the demerol grind. And maybe next year, if you mention the dead, the fellow you speak of will be scratching at his head, and muttering (so fleetly and so idly is fame):

"I seem to remember a skate by that name. And if you imagine that when you are dead the world will be tolled clear out of its tread, that people will weep till they wear out their eyes, you're in for a jarring post-mortem surprise. The world will roll on without slipping a cog when you and the dead ones are lost in the fog that hangs over the breast of the murmuring Styx; the people will traffic and play the old tricks; the women will gossip, the children will dance, and if you are mentioned it will be by chance. The sun neither rises nor sets in your clothes, the planets don't borrow their light from your nose—the globe that we live on goes round in a ring, but you're not the fellow that's pulling the string; so don't let your head get too swollen for use; don't think you're an eagle if you're but a goose."

Dinner Stories

Beatrice Herford, the famed monologist, appeared in her specialty in London for a while. One afternoon she had just made her appearance on the stage when a cat walked in and sat down beside her. "You get out!" said Miss Herford, sternly. "This is a monologue, not a catalogue!"

The conversation turned to the grilling that witnesses sometimes get a few evenings ago, when Senator John K. Shields of Tennessee told of the courtroom experience of a man in the South.

The man in question, the senator said, was a witness in an important criminal case. Being known as quite an artistic tippler, he was attacked on this vulnerable side by the opposing lawyer as soon as he reached the stand.

"And now, Mr. Smith," calmly queried the legal one, after putting a few preliminary questions, "you are a drinking man, are you not?"

"That," promptly responded the witness, dignifiedly straightening himself, "is my business!"

"Of course," was the easy rejoinder of the lawyer. "Now then, tell the court, Mr. Smith, if you have any other business."

A Reservation.

"Does your son's new occupation as an aviator suit him?" "Well, not down to the ground."

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once children there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

The Headquarters of General Meade during the battle

Defense of Little Round Top - Death of Weed - Peach Orchard - Fight of the Louisiana Tigers - Intense Loyalty of Confederates To Southern Cause Pathetic Hospital Scenes

THE morning of July 2nd, 1863, dawned bright and clear and the opposing forces were preparing and maneuvering for positions of vantage to resume the terrible conflict. Meade had perhaps made the best use of the delay between the night of the preceding day and the opening of the second day's battle. He had marshaled his entire army at points where they could best resist assault or originate attack and even before the contest had really opened much of the loss of prestige of the day before had been regained and the Union forces went into the fray with fresh courage.

As early as nine o'clock in the morning fire was opened on the Sixty-Third Pennsylvania Regiment belonging to the corps commanded by General Sickles which had been picketing along the Emmitsburg road. A company of sharpshooters were sent out and they returned with the news that the woods were swarming with Confederates. The firing continued at intervals until about three o'clock in the afternoon when there was a terrific conflict around Round Top which rolled on toward the Peach Orchard. The artillery fire was appalling, but this was only the prelude to more desperate work. General Longstreet, one of the greatest generals of the Confederacy, was moving his men down to strike the extreme Union left a blow and if possible crush it. The men in gray came on until it was thought that Little Round Top would fall into their hands, but the arrival of Sykes' Corps saved the day for the Union forces at this particular point.

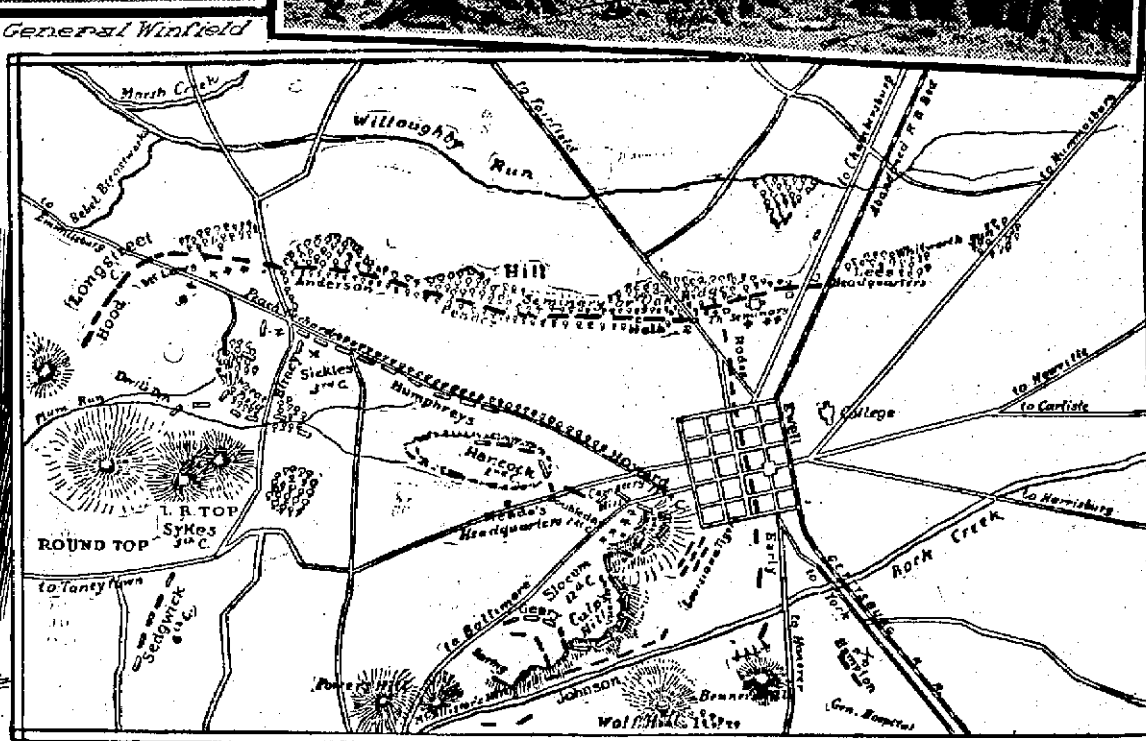

General Weed was shot while on the summit of Little Round Top. Believing that he was about to die he was giving Lieutenant Hazlett his final message when the bullet of a Confederate sharpshooter sank into Hazlett's brain and he fell dead across the body of his dying friend. General Weed was carried to the Bushman farm house nearby which had been turned into a hospital. He knew that he could live only a few minutes longer, and when Lieutenant William H. Crennell came to his side he asked that the ring he wore be taken from his finger and sent with his pocketbook containing private letters to the young lady to whom he was engaged to be married—the daughter of the late Simon Cameron of Pennsylvania, who for a time was Secretary of War in Lincoln's Cabinet.

The greatest bravery was displayed by both armies and there were several hand to hand conflicts. The spots known as the Wheatfield and the Valley of Death were covered with the dead and dying, and after the storm of battle had ended and the hospital corps and burial parties came on the field the scene was a most horrible one. Down in the Valley of Death they found the body of a Confederate soldier—a fine specimen of manhood. He had crawled away to a secluded spot behind a rock and laid himself down to die. In his hands tightly clasped was an open book containing the pictures of three small children. Wounded and alone, the din of battle still sounding in his ears, he had gazed upon the faces of the three children so soon to be fatherless. The man was buried with the simple headstone "UNKNOWN" to mark the spot where he was engaged to be married. Three little children waited in vain for the father whose last act in life was to look upon their baby faces. Who can picture the mental suffering of this man as his life ebbed away?

General Warren, who was Meade's chief engineer, played a most important part in the defense of Round Top, and it seems but fitting that a bronze memorial in his honor has been erected on the very spot upon which he stood during the early hours of the battle. It is said that General Warren never made an official report and was always extremely modest in speaking of his work there.

At the close of the day in this part of the field the Union forces still held Little Round Top, while the Confederates were at the westerly base of the hill and were also holding the rocky cavern known as Devil's Den. While these momentous events were transpiring at the left the fighting on the right was no less severe for General Ewell was at the same time making a well-directed effort to carry the right of the Union line, and it was during this engagement that the famous charge of the Louisiana Tigers was made. These men came forward seven hundred strong and met the Union forces in a hand to hand conflict. It was nearly dark when the charge took place and the semi-darkness added to the horror of the scene. One of the most dramatic scenes occurred when a Confederate lieutenant tried to grasp the battery's guidon which was planted on the breastworks. As he was in the act of gaining it a soldier named Riggins, who was its bearer, rode up and shot him through the body, and seizing the colors Riggins leveled his revolver again, but ere he could fire he fell pierced with bullets and soon afterward expired. The men of both armies were now in the midst of the battle, and in the darkness it was difficult to distinguish friend from foe. A struggle for the guidon ensued. It had fallen into the hands of a Confederate. This was discovered by Lieutenant Brockway, who seized a stone and flung it to the ground and the next instant the Confederate bent over him, and at first sight thought him dead, but the white lips moved and he whispered:

"Now I lay me down to sleep—I pray the Lord my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake—I pray the Lord my soul to take; And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

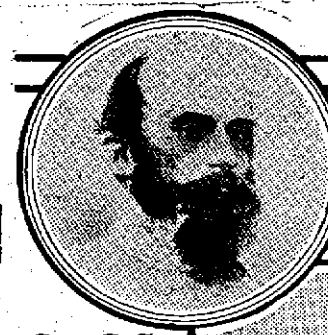

Then he opened his eyes—"My mother taught me that when I was a little boy, and I have said it every night since I can remember. Before the morning dawns I believe the Lord will take my soul for Jesus' sake, and before I die I would like to send her a message. The nurse knelt on one knee beside the improvised bed and wrote a letter to the soldier's dictation. Then he closed his eyes. Just as the sun rose his spirit went home—his last words being those which he learned at his mother's knee in early childhood:

"I pray the Lord my soul to take; And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

The battle for the day ended with the Confederates in possession of Culp's Hill and it was held by them throughout the night. On the left Sickles had been pressed slowly back to the position he had occupied in the morning and his lines were still in good order, but many of his brave men had gone to the Great Beyond. The situation had not greatly changed except that each army had lost about ten thousand men. The day after the battle was sickening according to the story of a surgeon who was one of the first sent out. "Turn where I would," he said; "my eyes rested upon human bodies. Many of them were turning purple, and already there was a stench. Many had been killed in the act of firing. In one part of the field I found Major Light, the Assistant Adjutant-General on Ewell's staff. His horse also had been killed and was lying beside him. I turned my attention from the dead to the wounded. One of the first I found was a Confederate—a mere boy. He was beyond human aid and feebly asked for water. One of my men raised him gently and put the canteen to his lips. 'Is there anything more we can do?' I asked. 'Yes,' he said, 'a message. I hastily pulled out a piece of paper and pencil. He gave me the address of his mother. 'Tell her I am dead, how I died—she knows how I lived. A few minutes later he had passed away. I wrote to the boy's mother and afterward learned that he was her only child.'

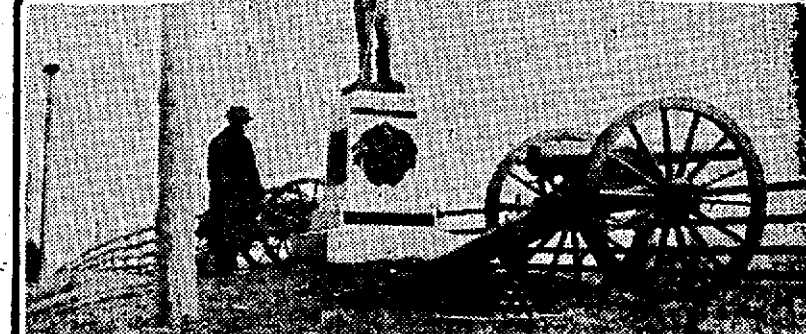

Several councils of war were held during the night by the officers, but the greater number of the men slept for they knew that the first gray dawn of the morning meant the renewal of this awful struggle of brother against brother."

Hampton's Battery close to the Peach Orchard where the second day's battle was thickest.

after the fight. He was pushing his way through a crowd of idle spectators when one of the wounded men called to him.

"Are you a Confederate?" he inquired in a feeble voice.

"Yes. What can I do for you?" asked the surgeon going to his aide. The man caught hold of the surgeon's arm and said pathetically, "What do you think, doctor? I am wounded and I am in the defense of my country and these people are trying to make me take the oath of allegiance to theirs."

There was something so intensely loyal in the man's voice and manner that the crowd moved away in silence and the surgeon was so overcome that he dared not speak lest he should burst into tears. So he merely pressed the hand of the loyal Southerner upon whose brow the death shadows were fast gathering.

Out in a barn which had been turned into a hospital the nurse was going his rounds when he came upon a young soldier from the North who had aided in repulsing the Tigers but one of their bullets had given him a mortal wound. He was a manly young fellow and one who only a few hours before had been fighting for his country with all the patriotism and vigor of youth; but now the strong arms were listless and the dark hair was matted with blood. The nurse bent over him, and at first sight thought him dead, but the white lips moved and he whispered:

"Now I lay me down to sleep—I pray the Lord my soul to keep. If I should die before I wake—I pray the Lord my soul to take; And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

Then he opened his eyes—"My mother taught me that when I was a little boy, and I have said it every night since I can remember. Before the morning dawns I believe the Lord will take my soul for Jesus' sake, and before I die I would like to send her a message. The nurse knelt on one knee beside the improvised bed and wrote a letter to the soldier's dictation. Then he closed his eyes. Just as the sun rose his spirit went home—his last words being those which he learned at his mother's knee in early childhood:

"I pray the Lord my soul to take; And this I ask for Jesus' sake."

The battle for the day ended with the Confederates in possession of Culp's Hill and it was held by them throughout the night. On the left Sickles had been pressed slowly back to the position he had occupied in the morning and his lines were still in good order, but many of his brave men had gone to the Great Beyond. The situation had not greatly changed except that each army had lost about ten thousand men. The day after the battle was sickening according to the story of a surgeon who was one of the first sent out. "Turn where I would," he said; "my eyes rested upon human bodies. Many of them were turning purple, and already there was a stench. Many had been killed in the act of firing. In one part of the field I found Major Light, the Assistant Adjutant-General on Ewell's staff. His horse also had been killed and was lying beside him. I turned my attention from the dead to the wounded. One of the first I found was a Confederate—a mere boy. He was beyond human aid and feebly asked for water. One of my men raised him gently and put the canteen to his lips. 'Is there anything more we can do?' I asked. 'Yes,' he said, 'a message. I hastily pulled out a piece of paper and pencil. He gave me the address of his mother. 'Tell her I am dead, how I died—she knows how I lived. A few minutes later he had passed away. I wrote to the boy's mother and afterward learned that he was her only child.'

Several councils of war were held during the night by the officers, but the greater number of the men slept for they knew that the first gray dawn of the morning meant the renewal of this awful struggle of brother against brother."

Side Lights On The Circus Business

By D. W. WATT

(Copyrighted.) About twenty-two or three years ago a young man by the name of Parsons, whose home was in Burlington, Wis., started in show business with the Ringling Brothers. His first venture was that of looking after the privileges which meant the candy, popcorn and peanut privileges of the show. When Mr. Parsons first started in the business he only employed four or five men, but as the show grew the privileges became greater and necessarily took more men to do the work.

"Patch" Parsons, as he was known with the show, was a large square stand in the menagerie which was well supplied at all times with candy, popcorn, lemonade, and everything of that kind to catch the youngsters. Mr. Parsons was successful from the start and year after year his business grew and the show grew and it was only three or four years till he had a good sized bank account.

He commenced many years ago buying farming land in South Dakota and after a year or two he engaged the services of an old friend from Burlington, by the name of Crockett, sent him west to take charge of his land interests. For the time being these lands are between Vernon, Mitchell and are said to be among the finest in South Dakota.

In talking with Mr. Parsons he said he was with the Ringling show twenty-one years and never had a losing season. He said, "While I sometimes feel that I would like to hear the band playing and watch the large crowds, still I am well satisfied to be where I am and look after my farm and cattle."

Mr. Parsons had one hundred and sixty-five head of young calves on his ranch this spring which must be a fine sight to look at as they are all high bred ones and in two or three years later will also be ready for the Chicago market. And this only goes to show the money it is possible to make with a circus selling popcorn and lemonade.

In the middle eighties with the Adam Forepaugh show one of the strong features was the western riders and about twenty-five cowboys were with the show that season. Among the rest was a young man by the name of Charles Cody, who was a great broncho rider and always said he could ride anything that wore hair. We were in Boston, Massachusetts, for two weeks and about the middle of the engagement Mr. Forepaugh made arrangements with young Cody to ride an elk that was with the show. This elk was as wild as a western jack rabbit and could run much faster than young Cody said it. They would take him from the cage and take him in on the hippodrome and cinch his saddle on him that he would ride him around the hippodrome. The took about twenty-five men to get the elk onto the track and cinch the cowboy saddle on him.

The entrance between the hippodrome track and the menagerie was barricaded with high plank about ten feet high so that the elk could not make his escape back into the menagerie. When young Cody got into the saddle away went the elk on a two minute clip around the hippodrome track and when he came to the barricade he attempted to jump it, but struck the top of it with his breast and was going at such a fast speed that although he dropped, young Cody went on over the barricade some fifty feet out into the menagerie.

The men rushed to him and expected that he was killed, but found him still breathing and took him into the dressing rooms and sent for a doctor and while he recovered it was some days before he was able to drive a broncho and it is safe to say that this was young Cody's last over-land trip on an elk.

These rough riders of the west were willing to try and ride anything that they could cinch their western saddles onto. This same season, Mr. Forepaugh advertised that he would $1,000 for any broncho that could not be ridden by some one of his famous rough riders.

We were showing in Hartford, Conn., and along toward the close of the show two men came onto the grounds on horse back leading a wild broncho between their horses. They had him fastened to their saddles and he looked the bad one that he proved to be. One of them came up to the ticket wagon and said, "We want to see Mr. Forepaugh. We have got a wild broncho here and we are after his $1,000."

Mr. Forepaugh sent back after a rider known as "Wild Horse Harry" and when he came to the front door, Mr. Forepaugh said, "Here's a wild broncho for you to ride."

After getting some of his friends to help him they took the broncho around into a vacant lot, threw him onto the ground and cinched the saddle on him and "Wild Horse Harry" made his start with no bridge or anything to guide him about the field. It was a very hot day and they had not gone ten rods when Harry took off his big wide brimmed hat and was hitting the broncho on one side with the back of his hand and the other and the broncho was buck jumping in every direction.

But the rider sat there as easily as a feather as the average man would sit in an arm chair. After short time the broncho saw that it was no use and he lay for more than an hour before his owners could get him up and started back for home. In a jesting way Mr. Forepaugh told them to go home and get a tough one and come back; that that kind were too easy for his kind of riders.

A few days ago Mr. E. L. Brown, manager of the Caloric Company, was surprised to find among his mail a letter from the Young Buffalo Wild West Show from Syracuse, N. Y., and on opening it found that it was an order for a fireless cooker from the famous rifle shot Annie Oakley. Annie Oakley wanted one of a special make with three compartments, but smaller than the average size and she said she wanted it to cook their evening lunch for her husband and herself after the show. She sent a check in the letter and ordered the cooker sent to Toronto, Canada. She remembered from last year that Janesville was the home of the fireless cooker and this one will surely do his share of advertising for the Janesville factory.

Yesterday morning at 10:30 Mr. and Mrs. Al Ringling pulled into Janesville in a large Pierce-Arrow touring car on their way to their home in Baraboo. They left the La Salle Hotel in Chicago yesterday morning at exactly 7 o'clock and at 10:30 pulled into Janesville. They left in a few minutes for Madison where they took dinner and in the afternoon drove to their home in Baraboo.
